

Conservation through research and education

Helpful Links

The U.S. Geological Survey posts its latest findings on polar bears here:

http://www.usgs.gov/newsroom/special/polar_bears/

The U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service has a section on its Web site devoted to polar bears and their conservation:

<http://alaska.fws.gov/fisheries/mmm/polarbear/issues.htm>

The Canadian Wildlife Service devotes a section of its Web site to its field projects on polar bears, including the Western Hudson Bay population:

<http://www.mb.ec.gc.ca/nature/ecb/da02s14.en.html>

In addition the Service has prepared this fact sheet on polar bears:

<http://www.hww.ca/hww2.asp?id=99>

The IUCN Polar Bear Specialist Group held its 14th working meeting in Seattle in June 2005. The 198-page report contains detailed information on the status of polar bears and includes updated data from 2006. The proceedings also explore threats to the bears and report on current research projects and management issues.

<http://www.polarbearsinternational.org/polar-bear-status-report/>

Also visit the Polar Bear Specialist Group Web site at:

<http://pbsg.npolar.no/>

For maps and coverage of sea ice loss, visit the National Snow and Ice Data Center Web site at:

<http://nsidc.org/>

Dr. Steven C. Amstrup of the U.S. Geological Surveys takes an in-depth look at polar bears in this document:

<http://www.polarbearsinternational.org/polar-bears-in-depth/>

This section of the PBI Web site is packed with fun facts on the bears, from myths and misconceptions to polar bear evolution and Inuit beliefs:

<http://www.polarbearsinternational.org/bear-facts/>

Emmy-award winning videographer Daniel Zatz posts highlights from PBI's fall Polar Bear Cam at:

<http://www.wildlifehd.com/polarbearcam/HDclips/>

Daniel Zatz's b-roll of polar bear footage for media use is available here:

http://www.wildlifehd.com/polar_bear_b-roll.html

What's the latest on the bears? Visit our "In the News" section for the latest reports:

<http://www.polarbearsinternational.org/in-the-news/>

Read complete descriptions of PBI's research projects at:

<http://www.polarbearsinternational.org/pbi-supported-research/>

Students who take part in PBI's fall Leadership Camp to Churchill, Manitoba, post daily journals online at:

<http://www.polarbearsinternational.org/student-journals/>

PBI's fun and informative quarterly newsletters are online at:

<http://www.polarbearsinternational.org/newsletter>